LATEST VICINITY NOTES

Many Things of Interest Clipped and Condensed from Exchanges.

Mrs. Betty A. Minnan was found dead in bed Wednesday morning at her home near South Plymouth. She was 82 years of age and death was attributed to heart disease.

Dr. and Mrs. F. D. Branch of Englewood have returned from an extended trip to South America, made in connection with a representative party of members of the college of Surgeons. Their trip was on the eastern coast with various stops to Buenos Aires. Thence they crossed the Andes and returned via the Pacific ocean and the Panama canal. Mr. and Mrs. Branch are both well known in Oneonta, where prior to their marriage both had resided, the latter being a daughter of Rev. A. J. VanCleft.

Joseph and Anna Petrovsky, aged resident of the town of Dickinson, Boone county, some years ago decided their farm to their son, Frank, on condition that he should maintain them during their lifetime. Later he sold the farm to Leonard Misata, and the latter ordered the parents to move, and began disposing of proceeds. They failed to appear at the hearing and the justice of peace issued a writ of dispossession, and they were set out that day. Proceeding has been begun on appeal, and in the meantime Frank Petrovsky is living on the farm, the sale being alleged to be a subterfuge in order to get the old people out.

Murray G. Tanner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Tanner of Cooperstown, has been elected editor-in-chief of the St. Lawrence university.

On Monday evening the Rod and Gun club of Worcester received nine men and boys of Worcester and placed them in the Worcester and Decatur streets. Each can contained about 200 fish and was by far the largest number placed in local waters in recent years. It is only through these restocking efforts that trout are permanent inhabitants of these waters.

Progress on the Shandaken tunnel has been so surprisingly good that it may be ready to deliver water to New York city by the end of the year. The tunnel has been entirely excavated and over ten miles of it is now lined with concrete.

Modern Drills.

Mrs. Josephine Daniels said at a dinner given at Worcester:

"I asked a little boy the other day if his mother had gone to a certain dance. He said she had, and I went on."

"What kind of a dress did she wear?"

"A long, short dress," said I.

"No, no," said I. "A dress can't be long and short both. What do you mean, child?"

"I meant," said the little boy seriously, "that it was long in the waist and short at the top and bottom."

Sunday School Hymns.

"Automobile song?" her mother asked. "I don't know any automobile song."

"Yes, yes, you do," the child responded, positively. "We sing it at Sunday school. You know—that one about going home on high."

Concrete Road in Bad Condition.

The short strip of concrete road near Emerson station which was put in last year, is badly heaved by the frost and some are of the opinion that it will have to be taken out and replaced. Deep crevices extending lengthwise of the road for some little distance make the place dangerous, especially for anyone driving at night and not familiar with the condition.

FIND BURIED MOUND BUILDER

Excavators Find Skeletons Believed to Date From 500 A. D.

A burial ground of what is pronounced to be an ancient group of mound builders has been unearthed directly across the river from Albany, Oregon, by Clyde Peacock, a farmer, while plowing a field.

So far, 13 skulls, all well preserved, have been unearthed. There were mortars and pestles with nearly every skull.

J. G. Crawford, local authority on prehistoric specimens, holds the theory that the skeletons were buried shortly after 500 A. D. because, he said, at about that time a Buddhist priest visited this coast and after returning to China to get more missionaries came back and taught the dwellers here. After this visit by the Buddhists, Mr. Crawford says, pestles and mortars were buried with their dead by mound builders.

Upon examining some of the best specimens of bones, Mr. Crawford declared that the race had been one of great size and strength.

Jefferson and Hamilton. Thomas Jefferson as Washington's secretary of state, and Alexander Hamilton, as his secretary of the treasury, had opinions on subjects of national importance that were diametrically opposite. About one grew up under the Democratic party, and about the other the Federalist.

INDIAN RICHEST OF AMERICANS

Three Hundred Thousand Red Brothers Own $130,000,000 of Forests and Woodlands.

ANNUAL INCOME TWO MILLIONS

Forests Conducted by Indian Forestry Service According to Advanced Principles—Administration Costs Indian Only 10 Per Cent.

Do you think Uncle Sam is making up for the past wrongs done the red brother? This story gives an interesting insight into what a paternal government now is doing for him.

Washington.—Sentimentally considered, it is generally conceded that the poor Indian, is right in the midst of the pauper class; but when his material assets are considered he becomes the richest of Americans, potentially and perceptually speaking; indeed, the richest of all humans. If the individual Indian could cash in on an equal distribution basis his share of the lands, live stock, minerals and forests at their present valuation he would be immeasurably better off than the average white American, says the forest and lumber information service of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, which has been making a study of the Indian forests, and incidentally reports that as against the average white man's $1,800, the red man would possess about $2,400; for the total Indian estate is $727,000,000 and there are but about 300,000 Indians.

One of the richest of the Indian assets is not often brought to public attention, viz., the Indian forests. As a lumberman, the Indian is collectively an exceptional magnate. The 300,000-odd Indians own 35,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber—an important factor in the American supply of forest products—worth today at least $100,000,000; and the young growth in these forests and the land they stand on represent $30,000,000 more. If this forest wealth were divided equally, every Indian in the country would have about $430 of forest wealth.

Awake to Value of Timber. The Indians began to realize about 25 years ago that trees represented real wealth, and the last clash of any consequence between the military and Indians was in northern Minnesota in 1898 when the Leech Lake Chippewas literally took to the tall timber in full fledged strength when they concluded that loggers who had been allowed the privilege of removing dead and down timber from the reservation were not finding anything in the woods that wasn't dead and down, at least when they got through with it. It cost the lives of eight soldiers of the Third regular regiment and the wounding of about 25 others for the Indians to impress on the government that they were right on the job of looking after their timber. This was not an Indian uprising in a proper sense but was just a resort to arms, as the Indians saw it, to protect their established property rights. Whether this demonstration of force had anything to do with it or not, it is a fact that the systematic forestry and business management of the Indian timber lands began at about that time.

The Indian bureau of the Department of Interior asserts that during the last quarter of the Nineteenth century many millions of feet of timber were removed from Indian reservations in the states of Wisconsin and Minnesota without proper supervision of the cutting and without adequate protection of the interests of the Indians. Congress provided no funds for protection or for the development of a system of merchandising timber. The first general act of congress dealing with the timber on Indian reservations was in 1889 and authorized the sale of dead and down timber by the Indians of any reservation, and one of 1897 specially authorized the sale of such timber on the lands of the Chippewas Indians in Minnesota. The Indian service considers now that both were unsound in principle as they encouraged the destruction of the timber by fire, to make it "dead and down," and surreptitious cutting. It was not until 1903 that congress gave authority for the development within the Indian service of a regular organization for the efficient administration of Indian timber lands. At that time $100,000 was appropriated for forestry work on the reservations. In the meantime there is no doubt that a large part of the forest wealth of the Indians was dissipated. Since 1903, however, the forestry branch of the Indian service has been building up an efficient system of administering timber lands in accordance with the basic principles of the science of forestry. In 1910 congress authorized the sale of mature green timber for the first time. It then became possible not only to protect the Indian timber lands from fire and trespass, but also to derive from the forests an income that has financed much of the recent general industrial development on Indian reservations.

The Indians own altogether 7,000,000 acres of commercial forests in addition to large adjacent areas of woodlands; the two classes of land including an area larger than the combined areas of Massachusetts and Connecticut. The mature timber standing on these lands is estimated at $1,000,000,000 feet with a value of about $100,000,000. The Indians own forests of commercial importance in fifteen states, but the most extensive holdings are in the far western states.

Oregon is at the top of the Indian timber states, followed in relative order by Washington, Montana, Arizona, New Mexico, Wisconsin, California, Idaho and Minnesota. The handful of Klamath Indians in southern Oregon, who are the great timber lords of the aborigines, own about 8,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber standing in one of the finest tracts of virgin timber, largely western yellow pine, in the whole of the United States. At present stumpage prices this timber is worth at least $25,000,000. As there are only 1,178 Indians, including a few Plutes and Modocs associated with the Klamaths in the ownership of this timber, a Klamath is worth in timber alone nearly $25,000 and is entitled to rank with the owners and other plutocrats of the oil and land reservations. Down in the southwestern corner of the United States the Indians of the Fort Apache reservation have probably the finest body of timber in that state; and back in Wisconsin the Menominee reservation Chippewas still own a billion feet of hard and soft timber, which is recognized as the finest timber remaining in that state. The Indians of Minnesota own some of the finest stands remaining of eastern white pine, which is now nearly commercial extinction and is particularly valuable.

Since the establishment of the Indian forestry service in 1910 the Indian lands have been administered according to a policy of reconciling forestry principles with the present economic interests of the Indians. The reservation forestry problem is not just the same as that of the national forests, for it must be remembered that the Indian forests are private property of the Indians held in trust for them by the United States government. Many of the Indians, too, own their lands in individual allotments; and in such cases their timber is held for them from much the same point of view as an individual white settler would take. If the land is adaptable to agriculture the cutting is clean and without a view to reforestation. On the other hand in the case of the tribal forests the idea is to reconcile the need of immediate revenue for the owners with assurance of future value of the property, and here the principle is one of perpetual lumbering. Only mature trees are cut, and provision is made for protecting young trees from injury during logging operations and for the cleaning up and burning of debris of logging. The timber is generally disposed of to contractors through competitive bids, the contractor removing the timber himself under the supervision of and according to the regulations of the Indian forestry service.

Most Advanced Forestry Practice. It is the boast of the Indian forestry service that its regulations governing logging operations, promulgated in 1920, represent as advanced a state as has yet been made in American forestry practice anywhere. An illustration of the public or what might be called the white man's interest in the Indian forests is found in general regulation No. 10, which provides that in the discretion of the officer of the Indian forestry service, in charge, "a strip not exceeding 300 feet in width on each side of streams, roads and trails and in the vicinity of camping places and recreation grounds, may be reserved, in which little or no cutting will be allowed." This provision assures the maintenance of scenic values on the Indian reservations. Notwithstanding forestry regulations, some of the largest timber sales ever made by the United States government and at the highest prices have been made of Indian reservation timber in the last ten or twelve years. Five sales have amounted to approximately 500,000,000 feet each and a dozen others have exceeded 100,000,000 feet each. Large units of yellow pine have been sold on the Klamath reservation at $5.50 per thousand feet, and on the Flathead reservation in Montana at $6.50 a thousand. White and Norway pine of inferior quality on the Nett Lake reservation in Minnesota have sold at $16 and $13.65 respectively, and in a recent sale of nearly half a billion feet on the Quinault reservation in Washington, western hemlock brought the unprecedented price of $3.00, and cedar, spruce, Douglas fir and other species were sold at $5.00 a thousand. The timber of three units of this reservation sold during 1922 totaled more than 1,000,000,000 feet. From the Klamath reservation alone more than 100,000,000 feet are being cut each year. The latest sale of Indian timber was that of the Valley Creek unit in the Flathead reservation in Montana, 130,000,000 feet, at $3.12 a thousand for the western yellow pine and $3.01 for the other timber. During the past decade the value of the timber removed from lands under the jurisdiction of the Indian service has exceeded $1,500,000 annually, and this income will presently exceed $2,000,000. The cost to the Indians of the commercial and forestry administration of their lands, including the protection of the timber from fire, insect infestation and trespass, has been less than $150,000 annually.

Indians Get 90 Per Cent. The Indian forestry service is very proud of the fact that more than 90 per cent of the gross income from the Indian forest has been placed to the credit of individual Indians or tribes for use in their support or industrial advancement.

A striking illustration of the economic salvation prudent administration of their forests has meant to the Indians in many cases is found in the Jicarilla Apache reservation in New Mexico. In 1910 the Jicarillas, exceedingly poor, broken by disease and wretched beyond belief, were apparently nearing extinction. By means of funds realized from sales of their timber they have been rehabilitated morally and physically and are now far on the road to industrial independence.

The regulations make it imperative for loggers in the Indian forests to employ Indians wherever practicable. They are available and fitted for the work. Many hundreds of Indians thus have lucrative employment by themselves, so to speak. Extensive valuation surveys have been made on a number of reservations and the work is going ahead as fast as funds become available. This survey, besides furnishing data for a topographic map, gives the amount, kind and quality of timber, the soil classification and its adaptability to irrigation and farm crop production.

Importance of Surveys. The surveys are also very important in protecting the forests from fire, the all the reservations containing timber of any importance telephone lines have been constructed from central headquarters to various strategic points such as ranger cabins in the mountains and the fire lookouts. The latter are located on high mountain points, which afford a panoramic view of the timber below. Men are stationed in these lookouts throughout the fire season, constantly scanning the forests with binoculars. If such an observer discovers a fire he immediately determines its location with an instrument known as a fire-finder and promptly telephones the information to the forester in charge, who immediately dispatches a crew with tools and supplies to fight the fire. The Indian service cooperates with the forest service (national forests) of the Department of Agriculture and other agencies in fire detection and suppression. This, with a systematic patrol of experienced rangers and guards, affords insurance against heavy losses from fire. The average cost of this insurance has never exceeded half a cent an acre.

The proceeds from the administration of the Indian forests in the last twenty-five years have amounted to about $25,000,000 and it is likely that the Indian forests will bring in around $2,000,000 a year for the next twenty years, and a smaller sum indefinitely. Moreover, the permanent Indian forests will contribute in a considerable measure to the maintenance of a certain though limited supply of timber in the future.

PURPOSE OF GARDEN WEEK

Home and Public Grounds to Receive Attention April 22-28, Nationally Planned Improvement Period.

Ithaca, April 19.—April 22 to 28 has been designated as garden week by a number of state and national organizations, and during this time, suggests the state college of agriculture here, persons may well give attention to the establishment of vegetable gardens and to the improvement of home grounds, and public grounds, such as those around schools, churches, court houses, the public square, and the community cemetery.

One of the best methods of fostering interest in the improvement of home grounds, according to the college, is to start a garden competition for prizes, to be awarded at the end of the season, for the best-kept lawn and home grounds, for the best vegetable garden, and so on. It is suggested that there be not more than one or two classes; but there should be a large number of prizes.

Source of Prizes.

Usually, public-spirited merchants will be glad to donate prizes in the form of garden implements. Ordinarily, it will not be difficult to get horticulturists or landscape artists to help judge the various gardens.

The source of the award may be made the occasion of a meeting in which the good and bad points of the various gardens may be discussed, and the reasons of the awards explained. They then have a strong educational value for the ensuing year. Such contests have proved successful where they have been tried.

Cobleskill Safe Cracker Caught?

It was rumored last evening that a man had been apprehended a day or two since at Palatine Bridge who confessed to cracking the safe in the office of the Cobleskill Milling company Tuesday night and also stated that he had pulled a similar job at Cherry Valley. It was stated that the man gave himself away during a period of drunken delirium. No confirmation of the report could be secured.

LONG SOUGHT FUGITIVE

Man Arrested Here Charged with Theft of Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Goods at Ashbury Park, N. J.

The mystery of the disappearance of at least five thousand dollars' worth of merchandise from the shipping office of the American Railway Express in Ashbury Park, N. J., last fall, has been partially cleared up. It is believed, by the arrest here last evening by special agents of the express company of Harry A. McKibben, a former employee of the company. McKibben, who has been working in the D. & H. shops here for the past five weeks, was apprehended after he had boarded the evening train for Albany.

McKibben was a driver for the express company and it is alleged that he took the original shipping tags off trunks and packages and reconsigned them to an address in Yonkers, where he or others believed also to be implicated, secured them. Several thousand dollars worth of property, including trunks belonging to guests at Ashbury Park hotel, disappeared in this manner. The specific charge against McKibben is grand larceny in the second degree, the fact that the largest amount stolen amounted only to $500, making it impossible to arrest him for first degree grand larceny.

The special agents have been trailing the man since last September, locating him in Oneonta a few days ago. It is believed that he had knowledge that the officers were in the city looking for him and was trying to make his escape last evening. When questioned the man confessed to have stolen goods worth at least $5,000, but refused to sign a statement. He will be taken to Yonkers to answer to the charge. The fact that inter-state shipments were made, makes the crime a federal offense and hence a very serious matter.

NOTABLE ADDRESSES

that fully sustained his reputation and that kept his auditors keen for the next word lest they miss some point in his remarks. In his more sober reflections he decided the tendency of so many cure alls and suggested that perhaps what this old world needs most of all is relief from cure with expert advice, and a chance to breathe and function normally again. He commended the mission of laughter and said that we should not be frownyers, but smile. The man or woman with a smile wins and throughout his happy response he proved an adept in creating smiles—a typical example of the gospel he taught.

There were about 100 covers and seated with the two score local Rotarians, their ladies and a few invited guests were some 20 fellow Rotarians from Binghamton, who came to assist in celebrating the birthday of their vigorous child of but a year. An excellent dinner, one of the best which Mr. Petersen has arranged for any organization, was served, during which there was much music and song interspersed with some novel and entertaining features, arranged by the entertainment committee and staged in a manner to create much merriment among the diners.

Earle P. Elmore, the retiring president, to whom much credit is due for the successful year of the organization, presided as toastmaster. After welcoming the guests, with special reference to the pleasure of entertaining the Binghamton Rotarians, he made a short address as the retiring president. He expressed his appreciation of the cordial and hearty support of the membership during the critical period and called attention to the accomplishments of the past year. He emphasized especially the bringing of 50 Fresh Air children from the city to the country and declared that the evidence of improved health and other benefits the children secured were gratifying to the members. He said that much progress has been made in plans to list all boys of the city between 12 and 14 years of age and then encourage them to remain in school. It also has aided the Boy Scouts and proposes much valuable work with and for boys.

After the address of Mr. Elmore, Attorney Lee D. VanWoert delivered the charge to the three new members recently elected, W. H. Hoffman, H. W. Lee and E. S. DesNoyers, in which he briefly impressed that Rotary's aim is to afford an opportunity for service which is the sole standard of the organization.

Following Mr. Anibal, Toastmaster Elmore presented the newly chosen president, Dr. David H. Mills, who made a short response before assuming the chair, asserting his confidence in the future of Oneonta Rotary, with such a personnel and such standards as Rotary inculcates.

After the address of Rev. Mr. Tanner, President Mills expressed the keen appreciation of members and guests alike for the presence on the occasion of the visiting speakers and their responses and then called upon Prin. John F. Hummer of the Binghamton High school, the president-elect of Binghamton Rotary, who brought greetings from the sister and sister organizations and voiced confidence in the future of the Oneonta chapter.

Then the Syncretists were announced. They have played during the dinner and frequently between courses as in the two hours that followed the toast list, dancing was enjoyed by many.

Like the occasion of its organization a year since, the anniversary dinner augurs well for it gave to all members increased appreciation of the fact that Rotary is not the form but the spirit, and the thing itself, Service before Self.
